Members were dispatched to the courthouse to investigate a possible bomb threat on Oct 12 (approx 9:45am)

Surrey police received an anonymous call from a payphone. The caller advised that he overheard some youths talking about a pipe bomb @ North Vancouver court office. The caller hung up without leaving further details. Police were unable to determine the reliability of this call.

North Vancouver police attended the court house and advised the Sheriffs, the Sheriff than evacuated the building. PDS (police dog service) was called and conducted an interior and exterior search of the building. No bomb was located in the search. Once the building was cleared and deemed safe, Sheriff allowed for public access to the building after setting up a metal detector to the entrance at 23rd st.
