Hello Maureen:

Good stuff about the waterfront. I am herby sending this to all my contacts to make sure they will listen tomorrow morning on CBC as this will become the next big issue in the District of North Vancouver, the CCA (or is it NET now?) and it's puppies notwithstanding.

As for the Duchess issue, two of my supporters living on Weymouth told me that they were very disappointed in me, the rest just gave me dirty looks. They told me they would never vote for me again and that it was time for me to retire. I told them I have this weird thing about having peoples' life on my conscience but I agreed with them on the retiring point.

I see Councillor Lisa Muri (the Taurus) got upset during last night's Council meeting about Councillor Crist (me) bringing motions back. She was right - it is because I have faith in Lisa that one of these days she will catch on.

Ernie

Subject: Think Vancouver, Think Waterfront

The CBC has been running a series on TV and Radio about every aspect of the Waterfront under the above title. The North Shore will be featured on the TV CBC News Hour at 6pm tomorrow [Wednesday 9th] The subject, Waterfront Access.

The issue of Duchess has been around for many years. The people on Weymouth place have not been complained to according to them, however the LVCA has. The danger of Duchess became even more apparent to us when one of our long time executive members had a close family member living on Duchess. To use the words of his wife "it was a nightmare experience every time they picked their son up or dropped him off ". Weymouth made the statement to Staff that they did not know LVCA existed so it is not surprising they were not well informed on the research we have done on the issue and the several meetings we have had. On behalf of the LVCA I would like to thank you and the District Staff very much for finally dealing with this very dangerous situation which was bound to end in tragedy. The safety of the Lynn Valley community is very much part of our mandate.

Sincerely Maureen Bragg
