Aftertaste 2

Staff have reported, after a call from a rider concerned with the future of riding on Seymour, that a new line has been established along the old Aftertaste route. Although there is apparently some decent ladder work, the line heads right down the fall-line and will lead to serious erosion if it is continued to be used. As mentioned numerous times before, un-authorized construction will be removed and this new line will soon be gone.

Thank you,Chris.....

not that I advocate illegal building,but the trail is well thought out from what I remember,and much of it requirespedalling.....kinda sucked on the big bike.

The biggest mistake was posting the location on this site,though....now evry noob is going for a look.

steady frontin'

Yes, the trail may be well built in parts and may contain some pedalling but it is still an unauthorized trail that we had to destroy once before, it was not OK then and is not OK now. Everyone knows that no new trails are to be built until the others are brought up to speed so why must people keep testing the waters? we certainly have our hands very full trying to convince "the powers that be" that the original trails should be kept as it is. It is not a very good feeling tearing out some of the good hard work that people are putting into the trails, especially as riders, but we also have a job to do if we are to keep mtn. biking alive and well on Seymour and it involves removing unauthorized trails. The NSMBA along with many other volunteers have been hard at work for a long while now on existing trails and right when it seems like we are finally gaining on the overall goal we take a large step back like this. "secret trails" on the north shore are not a easy thing to keep "secret" this should be obvious by now please help the cause instead of working against it. 🙄

Thank you.

I am afraid that history tells us this kind of warning falls on deaf ears, ie. Dan Cowan, etc.
